Piano reduction doesn't have room for all parts of the orchestration. Organ is preferred to piano (when performed without an orchestra) which is especially beneficial to the brass fanfare at measures 58-67 where the organist is to use full orchestral stops and the bass pedals repeating middle "C" in eighth notes in measures 58-61 and then to ad lib measures 62-67. Otherwise, measures 58-64 may be eliminated in whole or in part.

When performed without an orchestra, two trumpets may play top notes of measures 15-17, 58-67, & 71-73, and you have the option of a brass quartet which is downloadable from the web site.

Normal duration is 4 minutes.

Full orchestral score and parts are freely downloadable at www.churchgrowth.cc/OneLord.html where some may also be heard. The composer may also facilitate acquisition of score and parts.

The composer would like to be informed in advance of any performance, then be provided a disk.
